

Reading #13: Aligning the Project to Promote Learning and Growth

As part of the balanced scorecard the chapter suggests that the card will never be balanced if the gap between employees and employers is synchronized by the defining of terms within a project. The title says it all by incorporating interest in a project we can develop the desire to learn. The Learning curve could be implemented in all projects thus creating the outlet of desired learning.

The satisfaction of Project Management is to gain interest in the project from the staffers. Given are guidelines to promote satisfaction and interest by all parties involved in a project. Also given are tools and techniques for managerial styles that bring out the best in all people.

Source:

Unknown. Implementing the Project Management Balanced Scorecard . n.d.