

Reading #14:
Balanced Scorecard and Project Scope Management

This chapter deals with the managers side of the Balanced Scorecard, suggesting that it is up to the manger to adhere to the processes in order to achive the balance. A way to do this is to know your business goals along with project goals and scope. This will then determine the constraints as outlined in the project plan. Constraints will affect the outcome since the result is financial.

The project plan will also outline the requirements for needed attributes such as general requirements will tell the manager if certain users are needed to fulfill completion. And at the other end of the spectrum there will be technical requirements that are more project orientated since they deal with tangible outcomes.

Source:

Unknown. Implementing the Project Management Balanced Scorecard . n.d.