

Reading #2: Plan Making Process

The Plan Making Process involves the understanding that the process varies as plans vary per project. It is important to know who the audience is because the audience varies by size and participating members. Another factor that influences the plan process is in relation to the sheer size of the project in geographical terms. That the goals and visions can be different as supporters and opponents vary on each side. That there is an analysis of the current problem based on individuals preparing the plans against those that are affected by the plan. And that the plan needs to have alternatives that would create subsequent goals.
